BLUE BELLS.

One fine morning, as I was leisurely walking down Main street, with no particular object in view, my attention was attracted to a little bootblack. Some one in passing had dropped, or carelessly thrown away a small bunch of blue bells. My attention was first attracted to the little fellow by his stooping to pick them up. but what was my amusement to see him tenderly kiss them and then carefully fasten them in the button hole of his faded jacket. My curiosity was aroused. I made up my mind to quiz the boy, so I walked up to him and asked him for a shine. I looked at the boy carefully, he was very small and very poorly dressed, he was pale and thin, and the large blue eyes looked as if they were full of unshed tears.

"Half-a-dime," he said, when he had put a final polish on my shoes.

I took out a quarter, and said, as I balanced it on my forefinger, "Here is ten cents for the shine and fifteen cents for the flowers," pointing to the bells in his button hole.

He put his small hand over the flowers quickly, and gave a quick gasp.

"No, sir; I can't sell them; if I was starving I wouldn't sell a blue-bell."

"And why not, my little man ?" I inquired.

He looked at me so piteously that I was almost sorry I had asked him. I put my hand on his head and said:

"Excuse me for asking, you need not tell me unless you wish to, and you can keep the quarter besides."

He looked up at me a moment and then said:

"I like you, and if you care to listen I'll tell you."

"Of course I am anxious to hear why you love the blue-bells."

"I will commence at the first and tell it all to you, but first let us go down there and sit down," pointing to some dry goods boxes not far from where we stood.

We went, and after seating ourselves on a small box behind some larger ones where we would not be observed, he took the blue-bell bouquet and holding it in his hand, began by saying:

"It is just a year ago this month, and it has been such a long year I thought the blue bells would never come," and then he stopped and put his hands over his eyes as if trying to shut out some horrid sight; I did not interrupt his reverie. Presently he took down his hand, and said abruptly:

"My father was a drunkard. We once owned some fine property, I've heard mother say, but that was before I was born, for we have always been poor as far back as I can remember. Mother says that father drank up the farm, the oxen, horses, sheep, cows, hogs, furniture and everything else. We got so poor mother had to go out and wash by the day to get food for Bess and me to eat. We lived in a little log house, a quarter of a mile from any one; it was about half a mile to town. Mother used to walk to town every day, except Saturday, to wash for somebody. On Saturday she washed for ourselves and ironed on Sunday.

"Sunday is the Lord's day. Your mother certainly didn't work on the Sabbath !"

"Yes, sir; she had to. Mother said the Lord made six days for the saloon-keeper and one for Himself, but He forgot to make a day for the drunkard's wife. She said the saloon keepers had confiscated the Lord's day, but she had hoped the Lord would consider her circumstances and forgive her for working on the Sabbath. She said if there were no saloons she would not have to work on Sunday. There were just four of us, father, mother, Baby Bess and Willie, that is me."

"So your name is Willie, is it ? but go on with your story."

"Well, as I said, mother was away all day, and sometimes she would not get home until after dark; she was not very strong, and sometimes she had big washings, and sometimes we didn't have much to eat, because the ladies mother washed for, didn't have the right change, or they would forget to ask their husbands for it. Mother always hated to ask for money after she had earned it, she said it did seem as if they ought to know that she needed the money, or she would not wash for it, and it generally happened that when one didn't have the change none of them did, so sometimes we got awful hungry while we were waiting for folks to pay us."

"Why didn't your mother ask for her money; it was her's after she earned it ?"

"She was afraid to, for sometimes they would get mad and say she didn't half wash their clothes, and then they would hunt up a new wash woman. It was one of those weeks when nobody had any change, it was Friday morning, we had very little to eat on Thursday, and on Friday morning there was only a pint of corn meal and about two spoonfuls of molasses. Mother baked the meal into bread, and told me to feed the baby when she woke, and to keep a sharp lookout for father; he was in town on a big spree; he was awful cross when he was drinking; it was not safe for him to get his hands on us, so we always hid when we saw him coming, if mother was not at home. Little Bess would nearly go into fits when she saw him coming home drunk. 'Don't let Bess cry if you can help it, Willie; I'm afraid I won't get home until after dark to-night. Mrs. Gray always has such large washings, but I will come as soon as I can, and will bring home some provisions, for I must have some money to night, or we starve.' She kissed Baby Bess, as she lay asleep and then kissed me at the door. 'Be a good boy, Willie, and take care of little sister.' Bessie slept a long time that morning, and I passed the time in sitting by her and going to the door to watch for father. When she woke up she said the first thing, 'Baby is so hungry, Willie, get something to eat.' 'Get up, Bessie, and let me dress you, and then we will have breakfast.' I had not eaten a mouthful, nor had mother tasted food before leaving home, and I was awful hungry myself. She got up, and I dressed, washed and combed her; but when we sat down to the table, Bessie looked at the food and then she just dropped her curly head right down on the table, and sobbed out: 'Oh, Willie, I am so tired of corn bread and molasses, I can't eat it. I want some meat and butter.' 'Don't cry, Baby,' I said, stroking her curls, 'mother will bring home something to-night.' 'But it is so long to wait—this is Mrs. Gray's day and mother is always late when she washes for her.' 'Try to eat,' I said, and I put a spoonful of molasses on her plate, and she did try; but she only swallowed a few mouthfuls, and then she left the table. I ate a small piece of dry bread, I thought maybe she would eat the molasses, so I did not touch it. All day she kept saying she was hungry, but refused to eat what we had. It was a long day to both of us. Father had not come home, and it was nearly dark; we were both sitting on the door step, Bessie laid her head against my arm, and began to cry, 'I'm so hungry, Willie, mother stays so late to-night.' 'Don't cry, Baby, mother will soon be home.' 'Of course she will,' exclaimed George Anderson; he lived a mile beyond up, and as he spoke he tossed a bunch of blue-bells into Bessie's lap. 'Oh, how pretty !' she exclaimed, while the tears dropped from her sweet blue eyes down on the pretty blue bells. 'Come, Bessie,' I said, 'let me fasten them among your curls.' She got up and stood on the door step with her face toward the house. I stood behind her and tied the blue-bells in her golden curls. I had just fastened the last one when some one jerked me off the bottom step. It was father; he was drunk, and I knew by his looks that he was almost crazy with drink. He pushed me aside and stood between little Bessie and me. Bessie turned to run, but he caught her and said, 'You have been crying; what did Willie do to you ?' She was so white and scared that I thought she would faint. 'Willie didn't do anything,' she gasped out. Father left her go and grasped me; he commenced to shake me awful. 'You rascal, what did you do to Bessie ? Tell me or I'll shake the breath out of you.' He shook me so I could not answer. Then little Bessie caught him by the arm, 'Please, father, don't hurt Willie; I was so hungry it made me cry.' He looked in at the table and saw the bread and molasses. 'You little white-faced liar, you are not hungry; look in at that table, there is plenty to eat and good enough, too, for such a brat as you,' and he shook her roughly. She began to cry and I tried to put my arm about her, but my father pushed me away. 'If you can't eat anything, I will give you something to drink,' and he caught her up in his arms and started down the path that led to the pond where we got wash-water. It was not a frog hole, the water was as clear as a lake, and it was surrounded by green grass and several large trees grew near the bank. It was a lovely place in summer and a glorious place for skating in the winter. It was only a short distance from the house. Bessie hushed crying but she looked so awful scared I followed close behind father. 'I'll give you something to drink,' he exclaimed, when he reached the edge of the water, and I followed, scarcely knowing what I was doing, I was so frightened. He waded in about knee deep, then he took Bessie and putting her feet under one arm, he put her little curly head down under the water. She threw up her little white hands and cried out, 'Oh, Willie, take baby,' just as the curly head went down. I waded around father and tried with all my strength to raise her head out of the water, but father held it down. I begged father to take her out, but he did not listen to me. She threw up her hands wildly, there was a gurgling sound, and then all was still. I begged father to take her out, I prayed God to save Bessie's life, but all in vain, God was far away and did not hear me cry, at least it seemed so to me. It seemed hours to me, but father at last lifted up Bessie's white dripping face. I called her name frantically, madly, wildly, but her blue lips didn't move; she was dead. Father carried her and laid her down on the green grass. 'I guess she won't be hungry for a while,' he said, as he laid her down, I was so stunned that I neither moved or spoke, until I saw the blue bells that I had twined in Bessie's hair floating out on the water. I could not bear to see them drift away; it seemed as if it was dear little Bessie's sweet, dead face drifting away; I could not bear the thought, so I waded out after them; the water was up to my arm-pits, now over my shoulders, still the blue bells were just beyond my reach, but I must have them; the water touched my chin, another step and I caught them, and just as I did, I heard mother call: 'Willie ! oh, Willie ! where are you ?' I looked for father, he was seated on the ground by Bessie. 'Willie! oh, Willie!' came mother's voice again. I was out of the water now, but so weak I could scarcely stand. 'Bessie! oh, Bessie!' I called. 'Here mother, at the pond.' Father gave one mad leap into the water, he plunged in face down. I was so terrified I did not know what to do. I heard mother coming. I trembled so I could not walk, so I crawled up to Bessie, and taking father's old straw hat, put it over Bessie's dead face to keep mother from seeing it. In a moment she came in sight. She saw I was dripping with water. 'Willie, what is the matter?" I could not speak. She lifted the hat off of Bessie's face. She stood for a moment as if turned to stone. 'Tell me how it happened, Willie; tell me quick.' Then I found voice and told her everything. She heard me through without a word, but when I had finished, shriek after shriek rent the air. She stood with clasped hands over Bessie, and shrieked such unearthly cries that soon the neighborhood flocked to the spot. Father had drowned himself; his body was taken from under the beautiful water and buried in the cemetery along side of Bessie. Mother was a raving maniac from the moment she uttered the first heart-rending cry over her dead baby Bess. I put the blue bells in a little box, and hung them around my neck, but after the funeral I lay in the hospital, sick for weeks with brain fever, but when I came to myself, the box was still around my neck, here it is," and he drew from his bosom a small box, which upon opening, revealed a few withered leaves.

'They speak of sweet little baby Bessie,' he said, as he closed the box and slipped it back under his shirt bosom. Then he looked at me straight in the eyes and said:

'Please, mister, don't ever vote for whisky. It killed my father and dear little baby Bessie, my only sister, and it locked mother up in a mad-house. Please don't vote for rum."

And I, man that I was, drew the boot-black down and kissed him, and said:

"God helping me, I never will vote for license or whisky men again."

He Had Tackled Him Once.

A lot of traveling men were seated about a stove, in a southern hotel, telling stories, when the name of a local tough and bruiser was mentioned.

"He's a bad citizen," remarked one, "and I'd hate to tackle him."

"Bosh," put in a little drummer, in a plug hat and fiery eye, "I tackled him once."

"Aw, come off. You ain't a patchin' on a man like him."

"All the same I tackled him."

"May be you did when he was in one town and you in another."

"Not much. I went right up to him and called him a liar to his face."

"Hold on, now, you can't give us a dose like that."

"You don't have to believe it if you don't want to, but I did just what I tell you, and I got the stuffin' kicked out of me in about three quarters of a minute, railroad time."

The crowd took him out and filled him up.

THOS. A. HENDRICKS,

The Vice-President of the United States,

Suddenly Meets Grim Death.

A Fatal Termination Not Anticipated to so apparently Slight an Illness.

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 25.—Thomas A. Hendricks, Vice-President of the United States, died very suddenly at his residence in this city at 4.45 o'clock this evening, under circumstances that were particularly distressing to his family and friends, inasmuch as they had not anticipated a fatal termination of his brief illness and nobody was with him when the end came. He returned from Chicago on Saturday last and since then had been complaining somewhat of a pain in his head and breast, but nothing serious was thought of it. Last night he and Mrs. Hendricks attended a reception given at the residence of Hon. John Cooper, Treasurer of the State, returning home in their carriage about midnight. Hendricks had taken off heavy clothing, which he usually wore, and put on a suit of lighter material, and before he got home he complained of chilliness and a certain degree of exhaustion, but attributed it to malarial influence. He sat by the fire for an hour or more before retiring, but declined to send for a physician, although urged to do so. He slept restlessly until about 8 o'clock this morning, when he arose, dressed himself and ate quite a hearty breakfast, saying that he felt much better and would attend to considerable delayed business during the day. He and Mrs. Hendricks walked out for nearly half an hour, and he had apparently regained his physical vigor and cheerfulness. An hour later, however, he began to be troubled with pains in the region of his stomach, and Mrs. Hendricks sent for the family physician, Dr. W.C. Thompson, the life-long confidential friend of the Vice-President. As the pains in his stomach continued to increase he was given an emetic and afterwards an injection and relief came in a natural way. He arose from his bed in which he had lain only a few minutes and read the morning paper, talking cheerfully with his wife and old house servant. Just before noon he had a relapse, however, and the physician was again summoned and administered the usual remedies besides bleeding the patient, and Mr. Hendricks again expressed himself as being greatly relieved. He remained in his room all afternoon, occasionally rising from his bed, to which he was compelled to return by a recurrence of abdominal pains. To all callers who came, and they were numerous, he sent word that he was indisposed, but would be glad to see them to-morrow afternoon about 4.30 o'clock. Mrs. Hendricks, who had been at his bedside all day, went down into the parlor to see a caller who had come to consult with her regarding the affairs of a reformatory institution of which she was one of the managers, and she remained with him about twenty minutes. Tom, a colored servant, and Harry Morgan Hendricks, a nephew and page in Washington, remained with him. The servant went out and Morgan stayed. Mr. Hendricks tossed uneasily in his bed and complained of great pain, but suddenly it seemed to cease and he said to his nephew: "I am free at last. Send for Eliza," meaning his wife, and these were his last words, for the young man not realizing the urgency of the message did not deliver it at once. Just before five o'clock Mrs. Hendricks came into the room and found that her husband was dead. The end of a long and eventful life had come peacefully and quietly. He lay in bed outside of the covering, only partially disrobed, with his eyes half closed as if he were in a gentle sleep. On his face there were no traces of pain or suffering, but the pallor had come over it that indicated only too plainly that he had passed away. It needed no close examination to tell that he was dead, and Mrs. Hendricks screamed and ran down stairs. A servant was dispatched to the residence of Dr. Thompson, adjoining, and he came immediately, but by the time he had reached his bedside the limbs of the distinguished dead man were becoming cold and rigid, and to Mrs. Hendricks' pathetic appeal, "Oh, doctor can't you do something," he was obliged to answer, "It is too late."

Mrs. Hendricks became almost distracted with grief and it was an hour or more before she became sufficiently composed to give any information about her husband's last moments. The family servants, two of whom had lived with Hendricks for years, ran about the house crying and moaning and there was the utmost confusion for a time. When the news was bulletined down town it was generally discredited, yet in a very few minutes a hundred or more of Mr. Hendrick's close political and personal friends had hurried to the house. Very soon a great crowd had collected around the entrance and on the street and it was found necessary to refuse admission to any and all comers except immediate relatives. Mr. Hendricks died in his private chamber, a large, comfortable room in which he did most of his work Dr. Thompson says that in his opinion Mr. Hendrscks died of paralysis of the brain, and there will probably be a postmrotem examination to establish what the disease was. For several years Mr. Hendricks had not been a robust man and was subject to frequent "bad spells," as he called them, during which he would be prostrated for days at a time. About two years ago he was confined to his room for several weeks by grngrenous affection of the foot, which at that time, it was feared would result in blood poisoning and it was then thought that the end of his life was near at hand, but he apparently recovered entirely from this and was in his usual health. Hendricks had been dead but a few minutes when forces of men began draping the State, county and city buildings, and throughout the night similar emblems were placed on nearly all the prominent business places and residences, so that by morning the city will have but on a general garb of mourning. All the city ministers will, in their Thanksgiving services to-morrow make appropriate mention of the death of the distinguished statesman, and Right Rev. Bishop Knickerbocker, Bishop of the Episcopal Diocese, of Indianapolis, of which church Hendricks was a lite long member, will, it is understood, preach a memorial sermon.

A Touching Train Story.

On the Chicago express from Omaha were two conspicuous passengers. One was a rather portly, apparently well-to-do gentleman, and the other was an infant of tender age. They were not traveling in company, however, and were, in fact, total strangers. But both seemed sad. The gentleman sat most of the time with his forehead resting between his thumb and fingers. He occasionally tried to read, but the magazine seemed to have no interest for him. Not a word escaped his lips, and his thoughts seemed far away. As for the baby, her woe was not so silently expressed. Her voice was quite loud in proportion to her size, and she lifted it on high. The other passengers cast reproachful glances at the poor, tired mother, who did her best to comfort the bairn, and at the same time take care of two other little ones, and muttered unspeakable things to themselves so that the little woman could understand even if she could not hear.

Soon the gentleman's eyes were fixed upon the infant. He seemed attracted where others were repelled. As some of the passengers sought seclusion in the smoking saloon, he walked up to the baby and held out his arms. In another second he held the little one close to his face. His embrace seemed to have that tenderness which influences even a baby. His fine whiskers were fair playthings for the tiny hands. His cravat was pulled away in the romp. Ere long his eye-glasses hid baby's blue eyes. And in half an hour she was sitting upon his lap biting at his gold watch, which he held within her reach.

Both gentleman and baby now seemed happier. He smiled at the mite's antics, and the mite had long since ceased her wailing. Hour after hour passed and the strange pair were still together. The mother could not keep her child more than ten minutes at a time. The big gentleman was always eager to have the little form again in his embrace. If baby slept her admirer watched her fondly, and hailed her waking as a joy. The hours of an autumn day are long aboard a railway car, but the devotion of baby's attendant did not tire. He was her inseparable companion, and he seemed never so happy as when the little white arms were about his neck and the little soft face was pressed against his lips.

"You are so fond of children," said the mother, "that I judge you have babies of your own."

"Yes, I have," the gentleman replied, a cloud coming upon his face. "I have one—a little babe like this I am hastening home to see her, as she is—she is—this telegram will show you."

And as the mother read: "Come home immediately—your child is dying," the gentleman's eyes were hid from view against baby's cheek.

Queer Letters.

The Youth's Companion says: If the hand-writing reveals anything of the writer's character, certainly what a letter contains tells us much more of the person from whom it comes. The queer conceits of people show as plainly in their correspondence as in their conversation.

Wit is no less pungent in the letter than in talk. If the soul of wit consists in brevity, then the wittiest of all letters ever written must be those which passed between two friends. The first contained only a note of interrogation (?), implying, Is there any news? The reply to this was a cipher (0), None.

Even an address may be given in a form so strange and comical as to provoke laughter. Charles Lamb once accepted an invitation sent him by his friend Haydon, in a note, as follows:

"MY DEAR HAYTON—I will come, with pleasure, to 22 Lisson Grove, North, at Rossi's, half-way up, right-hand side, if I can find it. Yours,
C. LAMB.

"Covent Garden, East,
"Half-way up, near the corner,

There is no less wit in the manner in which writers have sometimes subscribed themselves. A letter from Franklin to a friend in England, upon the breaking out of the Revolutionary war, is often quoted. It closes in this form:

"You and I were long friends. You are now my enemy, and I am Yours,
B. FRANKLIN.

This grim joke may have been original with the doctor, or it may have been suggested to him by the following very pointed note from one Scottish Highlander to another:

"MY DEAR GLENGARY—As soon as you can prove yourself to be my chief, I shall be ready to acknowledge you. In the meantime, I am Yours,
"MCDONALD."

What She Wanted.

Mrs. Sam Smart advertised for a colored servant. An elegantly dressed colored lady put in an appearance. She wanted fifteen dollars a month in advance, which was conceded. She wanted a room with a carpet and a stove, where she could receive the visits of "seberal gemmen who am payin me tensbuns." This was also granted. She was allowed to attend church all day Sunday and twice during the week. When a revival was in progress to be out every evening in the week. This and several other concessions were granted by Mrs. Smart, who is fanatically opposed to doing any hard work herself, and will put up with everything from a servant rather than soil her precious hands.

"And I wants hit understood about de meals," continued the would-be menial. "I likes to eat hearty. We has to hab beefstake or sausage ebery mornin' and for myself I want chocolate instead of coffee. Den I wants a lunch of cold ham or tongue about ten o'clock, so I kin hold out till dinner at one o'clock. I don't take coffee with my dinner. De coffee and cakes come about half-past five o'clock in the afternoon, which will make me hold out till tea at eight. De best time for supper am about eight. o'clock. Good supper I wants."

"I say," said Sam Smart, who had been listening with growing indignation, "suppose we keep you busy eating all the time, how much more will you charge by the month?"

He was reading a novel, and his white plug hat rested on the seat beside him. He did not notice the stoppage of the train nor realize that an old lady was searching for a seat. His mind finally drifted off the story to find her snugly ensconced beside him.

"Madam, I had a hat in this seat," he cautiously observed.

"Don't doubt it, sir," she replied, as she disposed of her satchel.

"And you probably sat down on it"

"Shouldn't a bit wonder."

"In which case the hat must be completely wrecked."

"It certainly must, therefore there is no need of my getting up until they call out my station. Please hist up the window. I allus did like the smell of coal smoke."

ECCLESIASTICAL ITEM.—Teacher—"What are the names of the seven days of the week?"

Boy—Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, Saturday."

Teacher—"That's only six days. You have missed one. When does your mother go to church?"

Boy—"When pa buys her a new hat."

Romance of a Claim.

A YOUNG DAKOTA SETTLER LOSES HIS FARM—HOW HE REGAINED IT.

A Sully [Dakota] letter to the New York Sun, tells this romantic story: A year ago last spring a young man named Belden came to this county, took up 160 acres of land, and built himself a shack. Two weeks later a girl named Helen Chapman took up the claim adjoining him on the west, and also built a cabin. The neighbors became slightly acquainted, but both were too busy to do much visiting. Belden was an easy-going-fellow, none too fond of work, and Helen was an active, aggressive, good-looking, and ambitious young woman. She did two days work to his one, and had a better farm at the end of sixty days than he would have had at the end of a year if he had kept on in the way that he was going.

After Belden had been on his place about three months he became weary of the monotonous life, and, going to town to have some fun, found so much enjoyment that he came pretty near forgetting to go home. When he had been gone longer than the time permitted by the land law, Helen, who had been watching her opportunity, jumped his claim, and in less than ten hours had a shack of her own standing on his farm. Belden returned at last, and, finding that a woman had jumped his claim, he said nothing. If it had been a man it would have been his duty to go out and fight him to the death, but as it was a woman, and a rather comely one at that, he thought he would say nothing and trust to luck to get rid of her. Occupying his own shack, he was not more than 300 feet from her new habitation. She held her ground well, treated him as an interloper, and never acting as though she had any idea that he belonged there.

Belden's wrath began to rise finally, and when he reflected on the comments that would be made if he permitted a girl to jump his claim he grew furious. Knowing that the temper of most settlers would brook no interference with a girl farmer, he went to town for consultation. First he talked with his friends. They shook their heads and said it was a mighty bad job. Then he consulted a lawyer, who gave him some hope.

In the course of a day or two he got two of his friends and the lawyer to go out to his place with him to see what they could do toward patching up a settlement. Once on the ground it was agreed that the lawyer should go and see the girl. He was absent an hour and a half, and when he returned he said it was no use. The girl was posted, and he didn't see what could be done about it.

"If it was a man," he said, "we could go over there and throw him by the heels into the next county, but it won't do to harm a woman."

The four talked the matter over, and it was finally agreed that the lawyer should call again in the morning, and represent to her that Belden's friends were coming to his assistance, and that if she wanted to avoid serious trouble she had better abandon her shack and leave his claim alone. The lawyer started out on this errand the next day, but he was back again in fifteen minutes with a lump on his head the size of a horse chestnut, where he said she hit him with an axe handle.

After talking the matter over, everybody being mad, it was decided that they would give her a scare as soon as it became dark. At about 9 o'clock all hands went over to the girl's new shack and surrounded it. At a given signal they yelled and fired their revolvers in the air. The reports had hardly died away when a shotgun was discharged from one of the windows of the shack, and a moment later another shot was fired from the other side of the house. The men waited in silence for a few minutes, when two more barrels were fired. This convinced them that the girl was not to be frightened, and they crawled away as stealthily as they could. All that night the girl's shotgun thundered at regular intervals, until her adversaries, who were vainly trying to sleep, wished that it would explode, and blow her and her shack to kingdom come.

In the morning Belden's lawyer and two friends started for town, leaving the jumped farmer alone in his misery. After their departure Belden did some work on the place, taking care not to run across the girl, and though they saw each other frequently they both avoided a meeting.

Things went along in this way until fall. Helen worked on her own farm a good part of the time, and Belden passed many days in hunting. He had made up his mind that he could tire the girl out, and he believed that after she found that he was not to be got rid of, she would voluntarily abandon the

THOMAS A. HENDRICKS.

Again death has taken one of the foremost men of this country and this time the merciless king of terrors called away the Vice-President of the United States. In him the land loses a statesman of proven abilities and a patriot in the highest sense of the word. He was a modest but true representative of right and reform in political matters and of the duties of good citizens and officials to the republic. His inculpable career should have an examplary influence on his successors in public life.

Thos. A. Hendricks was born on the 7th of September 1819, in Muskingum county, Ohio, and was consequently 66 years of age when he died. When Hendricks was a child of three years his father moved to Shelby Co., Ind., where he gave his son a thorough education. He graduated in 1841 and was admitted to the bar in Chambersburg, Pa., in 1843. In 1848 he entered the legislature of Indiana. In 1850 he became the representative of the Indianapolis district in congress for five years, and filled the position of land commissioner of the general land office for the next four years. In the campaign of 1860 he was the democratic candidate for governor but was defeated by Henry S. Lane. In 1862 the democratic state legislature of Indiana elected Mr. Hendricks U. S. Senator, and there he was at once recognized as a leader among his party associates, and soon gained national fame. At the expiration of his term as senator he retired to private life, but in 1872 his party again nominated him for governor and he was elected in spite of a republican legislature.

On the 30th of January 1876, the third day of the democratic national convention at St. Louis, Hendricks was nominated for Vice-President of the United States, with Tilden at the head of the ticket. The result of that election is well-known.

Again Mr. Hendricks retired from political life and started on a European tour. Shortly after his return he was nominated by the Chicago Convention for Vice-President and in November he was elected. Last March he entered upon his office.

THE forty-ninth congress will convene next Monday, December 7. It will consist of 325 members, of which 184 will be democrats and 141 republicans. Since the democrats have a decided majority there will be no contest for the speakership.

In the senate, where as heretofore, the republicans are in the majority, the election of a new president, which office became vacant by Vice-president Hendrick's death, will be the first work on hand. Of course, under the circumstances, the substituted Vice-president will be a republican. Logan, Sherman and Edmunds are the most available candidates, and we think, that the choice of the people naturally falls upon Edmunds, as the most honorable and temperate partisan of the three.

A PECULIARITY of the existing civil-service reform is that a vigilant watch is kept over those who enter government service and not over those who are discharged or who will likely have to leave it. Commissioner Eaton expressed himself the other day in words like this: "The civil service has two doors, and our business is to watch only the one, which admits the new officials; who gets thrown out of the other door is none of our business."

IT is said that in all commercial centres signs of increased business activity are noted. What we hope for in this section of country now is, that such activity may spread to the remotest parts of the commercial world.

THE death reaper has mown down a goodly number of men in high public stations of late. But right there all worldly distinction ends and we all must expect to stand before the judge of the universe at some time.

SPECULATIONS about the next national democratic ticket consisting of Hendricks and Hill will have to undergo a change since Gov. Hendrick's death.

THE FUNERAL of Vice-President Hendricks, which took place on Tuesday was attended by Secretaries Bayard, Whitney, Lamar and Endicott, and Postmaster-General Vilas. The latter directed all postmasters to close their respective offices between the hours of 12 m. and 5 p. m. on that day, out of respect to the memory of the late Vice President. Yielding to the pressing advice of many of the prominent statesmen around him, who thought the trip unsafe, President Cleveland did not go to Indianapolis to participate in the obsequies.

The Cost of the Postal Service.

WASHINGTON, November 29.—A. D. Hazen, Third Assistant Postmaster General, has submitted to the Postmaster General his annual report for the year ended June 30, 1885. The total postal revenue during the year was $42,567,843, while the expenditures were $50,942,415, leaving the excess of estimated total cost over gross receipts $8,381,571. During October last the number of letters received for special delivery at all special delivery offices was 140,820, and the gross income from the special delivery business during the month was $14,082, while the net revenue was $2,828. From information derived from the separate reports of Postmasters Mr. Hazen thinks that perhaps at most of the letter-carrier offices the special delivery system has been reasonably successful and, with proper management, is likely to increase; that at places having a population of less than 20,000 the system has been and probably will continue to be of no great practical value.

Miscellaneous News.

The workmen in some of Pittsburg's industries are forming new beneficial organizations, the object being to financially aid disabled comrades and those who are incapacitated for work by sickness. Instead of taking up collections, as hereto fore, each member of the organization will be assessed a certain amount on each pay day.

Representative Randall could not attend the funeral of Vice-President Hendricks. On Saturday evening he received a telegram announcing the sudden death of his near relative, Mr. George Earp, of Baltimore, and on Sunday he went over to that city to make the arrangements for the funeral. He took the body to Philadelphia on Monday. Mr. Randall and Mr. Earp grew up together from childhood, were partners in business and the warmest affection existed between them.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—Mr. George Bird Grinnell, of this city, who has just returned from the West said yesterday: "There are, to my positive knowledge not more than 700 bison or buffalo left on the American continent. About 180 are in Yellowstone National Park, Whyoming, and the remainder in the pan-handle of Texas."

Fear the Epidemic.

HUNTINGDON, Nov. 29.—The diphtheria, which has prevailed at Saxton and the neighboring parts of Huntingdon and Bedford Counties for two months, causing the closing of schools and churches, has been slowly extending in this direction and there have been a number of fatal causes in the rural districts adjoining this city. It is feared that the disease will become as epidemic here as at Saxton.

Have Stopped Fighting.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—A dispatch from Belgrade says that an armistice between Servia and Bulgaria was concluded at 3.30 yesterday afternoon. Advices from Sofia state that the armistice was only concluded after the Austro-Hungarian Minister to Servia had notified Prince Alexander that if the Bulgarians advanced another kilometer Austrian troops would cross the frontier and fight the Bulgarians. The Minister added that the capture of Pirot had saved Prince Alexander's military honor and assured his reputation. Fifteen thousand Servian troops are disabled. The army is sullen.

Secretary Whitney Makes Clerks Happy.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—This day of thanksgiving, if making others happy lends to our good cheer, was a joyous occasion for Secretary Whitney. On the desk of each employe of the Navy Department yesterday there was laid a card reading as follows:

"The Secretary of the Navy has arranged to deliver a Thanksgiving turkey to any officer or employe of the Department who will avail himself of the courtesy. J. W. HOGG, Chief Clerk."

To give all a chance to prepare for the holiday the Department was closed at 1 o'clock. The 200 employes—clerks, messengers and scrub-women—were busy until late in the evening selecting their fowls at the commission house where the arrangements were made for the delivery.

—DO NOT crucify the children by compelling them to take the horrible, nauseous compounds usually sold as worm medicines, many of them as worthless as they are obnoxious, but get a box of McDonald's Celebrated Worm Powders. Purely vegetable. So easy and pleasant to take that the children will never know a medicine is being administered. You will in addition secure the very best vermifuge possible to produce. A Black Eagle Captured.

HUNTINGDON, Pa, Nov. 27.—A few days ago Mr. Peter Heffner, a farmer of Juniata township, captured a large black eagle in a trap prepared expressly for the purpose. It is a beautiful specimen of the American black eagle. It is thirty-three inches high and measures seven feet and six inches across its outstretched wings. Mr. Heffner brought his prize to town to-day and disposed of it to Mr. Gilbert Greenburg, the agent of the Philadelphia zoological society in this place, for a very handsome sum. Mr. Greenburg will on Monday next take it to Philadelphia and place it in its permanent quarters.

The Italians Leaving for the South.

READING, November 28.—Three hundred Italian laborers passed through here this morning for Charleston, South Carolina. They are believed to be the first foreign laborers sent South from Eastern Pennsylvania, and hundreds are preparing to follow them to various Southern states. They are promised $1.25 to $2 per day, and it is believed that the climate of the South will suit them better than that of the North. The indications are that a great exodus of Italians, Poles and Hungarians will take place from Eastern Pennsylvania this winter and that most of them will go South.

Jay Gould to Retire from Wall Street Business.

The stock exchange firm of W. E. Conner & Co., in which Jay Gould is a special partner, with a capital of $1,000,000, and George J. Gould a general partner, will be dissolved at the end of the year. The partnership expires December 31 and it will not be renewed. Both of the Messrs. Gould will formally sever their relations with Wall street and will hereafter devote their time and energies principally to the management of the three corporation in which Jay Gould is most largely interested. Messrs. Conner and Morosini will in all probability continue business together, but the formation of the new firm has not yet been contemplated.

LEGAL ADVERTISEMENTS

NOTICE TO TAXPAYERS.—Whereas there is a general opinion prevailing among the taxpayers throughout the county that because a collector's warrant is good for two years, they have the same length of time in which to pay their taxes. Tax Collectors frequenty complain to us that many persons make this a pretext for refusing to pay their taxes until they are actually forced to do so, and these being generally such as are best able to pay. We therefore submit for your information the following Act of Assembly of April 15, 1834, in relation thereto:

"Every collector shall, within three months after receiving the corrected duplicate, pay into the hands of the treasurer of the property, county or township, as the case may be, the whole amount of the taxes charged and assessed in such duplicate, excepting such sum as the Commissioners, or Supervisors and Overseers, as the case may be, in their discretion, may exhonerate him from, on pain of being answerable for and charged with the whole balance remaining so unpaid."

You will readily see by the above Act that tax collectors are required to pay in the full amount of their duplicates within three months after the duplicates are placed in their hands

GENTS:—I feel it my duty to say respecting Burdock Blood Bitters, that it is the best medicine I ever took. I suffered two or three years from stomach troubles and dyspepsia as well as from liver and kidney complaint. I was not able to attend to my business. My wife was afflicted in much the same way. We read of your Bitters in the papers and made up our minds that we would try them. The result is my wife and I began to improve at once, and I am now able to do more hard work than before in ten years. It relieved my kidney troubles as well. We both wish you, the makers of it, Godspeed.

—The attendance of Prof. Bierly's meeting in the M. E church last Saturday evening was very small and for that reason the prospects for a singing class were not very flattering. We are unable to say whether Mr. Bierly will repeat the attempt or not.

—D. S. Kauffman & Co., the wide-awake merchants on Main street, beautified their store by a set of new and improved lamps, which brilliantly illumine their room in the evening, rendering it still more attractive and cheerful for their customers.

—FROM the pastor of the Olivet Baptist Church, Philadelphia, Pa: I was so troubled with catarrh that it seriously affected my voice. One bottle of Ely's Cream Balm did the work. My voice is fully restored.—B. F. Liepsner. 44-4t

—Rev. Dr. J. S. McMurray, a well-known Methodist minister, died at his home in Painter, Mifflin Co., last Friday. Deceased had been a Presiding Elder in the Huntingdon district, and frequently visited this county on fishing or hunting expeditions. He died of hemmorrhage.

—Deininger's Ready Reference Tax Receipt Book is growing in public favor. Customers from a distance are beginning to call for it. It is an admitted necessity for every tax-payer who does his business in a practical manner. It is arranged to last for ten years and sells at the low price of 40 cents. Call and see it at the JOURNAL Store tf

—We regret to see that a few privileged parties in this borough are allowed to slip clear on the general duty of cleaning their sidewalks when covered with snow. We would beg to remind the council that for the sake of justice and fairness they should enforce that part of the ordinances to the letter.

—John Miller, the clever butcher, has started on his winter's furlough. The business of the meat market is not brisk enough during the cold months to justify the proprietors in retaining John's services. We are sorry to see John leave the range and sincerely hope he will be at his accustomed stand by next spring.

MILITARY ORDERS.—Attention, battallion—shoulder arms—right face—forward march—to the mammoth store of D. S. Kauffman & Co., on Main St. Our army of customers are requested to turn their attention to the right place, where they can buy to the best advantage, and to step forward to our store for the best bargains.

—Rev. E. Harshey preached in the U. B. church last Sunday afternoon, but alas, there were but twelve listeners there to hear him and he took occasion to compare them to the twelve disciples and expressed his wish that there may be no Judas among them. No doubt the neglect of giving sufficient previous notice of his preaching accounted for the slim attendance.

—Boys, don't swear, it is a disgusting, unmanly habit; it does you no good; it lowers you in the opinion of others; it is heart-breaking to your parents and offensive to everybody. Quit it while you can, for after a while the habit will become so strong that to shake it off will be an impossibility.—Ex.

—Ladies, do not forget that the place to buy your hats and bonnets is at Mrs. E. J. Brumgard's on Main street. Her stock of Millinery Goods is unrivaled and is being continually replenished. For late styles, tasty work and reasonable prices she leads off. The holidays are coming on and if you are not provided yet with something new, you had better buy your goods of her.

—Prof. Barret of St. Lawrence county, N. Y., speaking of pulmonary diseases, says: Not one death occurs now where twenty died before Downs' Elixir was known. Over fifty years of constant success places Downs' Elixir at the head of the long list of cough remedies.

—A good deal of sympathy was manifested in Bellefonte for little Frank Foote, when in court last week. The Keystone Gazette of that town says: D. H. Hastings, Esq., and others raised something like $14 in money and gave it to the boy. A new suit of clothes was purchased and Horace Winkleman, of Nittany Hall, has taken the boy and promises to give him a good home and all the schooling possible.

—Slowly the reports come in of various festivities to take place in Millheim during the holiday season. The Lutherans begin with a Christmas entertainment in their church on Christmas eve. The Evangelicals some time ago announced their intention to hold a festival in the town hall on Christmas day and Saturday following. No doubt the other two churches will make preparations to celebrate the joyful season appropriately.

—Mr. W. B. Antoney, an expert roller miller, employed by Wolf & Hamaker, Chambersburg, Pa., was on a visit East last week and remained a few days at Penn Hall to look after the celebrated Allis Roller Mills, which he started about five months ago for J. B. Fisher. He was much pleased to find the rollers and all the machinery in perfect running condition. Of course the result is, first-class roller flour and Mr. Antoney says, that there is certainly none better made in the state.

—An exchange very pointedly remarks: "No man should get angry because a newspaper publisher duns him for money. A dun is not an impeaching of a subscriber's integrity, but simply an outcropping of a publisher's necessities. For instance, a thousand men owe a man from one to four dollars each. He has to dun them all to get enough to pay expenses. Instead of getting mad and stopping his paper, because the publisher asks him for his honest due, the subscriber should thank him for waiting so patiently."

DRIVING THINGS TO EXREMES.—A party of "hunters" from this place, whose names we will withhold for the present, shot a deer on Brush mountain on Tuesday which had been chased by their dogs ever since Sunday, and when they finally succeeded in killing the animal, it was almost chased to death, and its hind feet wore to bleeding stumps. Of course the meat was black and unfit to use. This is a violation of the law and an unpardonable cruelty to the poor brutes. We would call it butchering, not "hunting." Why is such a thing tolerated?

—The following attractive programme has been arranged by the committee for the next regular meeting of the Excelsior Literary Society, Millheim, Tuesday, Dec. 8th 1885:

Prayer by G. E. Limbert; Select Reading, S. H. Alter; Declamation, Lewis Frain; Essay, Miss Cora Kreamer; Select Reading, Milton Musser; Declamation, F. E. Gutelius; Select Reading, Miss Mabel Musser; Essay, Mrs. E. A. Bumiller; Declamation, W. F. Smith; Select Reading, G. W. Long; Essay, D. G. Smith; Select Reading, Miss Annie Rhoads; Oration E. H. Long; Essay, Miss Clara Reifsnyder; Select Reading, Mrs. A. A. Frank; Declamation, J. H Kreamer; To spell 25 test words, T. M. Osman. Debate—"Resolved that Columbus deserves greater honor for discovering America than Washington for establishing its freedom."

—On Sunday, Nov. 22nd, John Sharpless, a prominent and much-respected citizen of Chester, Delaware Co., Pa., was brutally murdered by a colored man, who came to the victim's house to ask for alms. While Mr. Sharpless, who belonged to the Quaker society, and was a charitable man, proceded to comply with the negroe's request, the fiend struck him the deadly blow. Eight negroes were arrested in different parts on suspicion of being the murderer. One of them, John Carpenter, answers the description quite closely, and has been identified by Mrs. Sharpless as her husband's murderer.

Since writing the above, Carpenter has been discharged, and the District Attorney says there are important clues to the discovery of the murderer, who, he is positive, is a white man.

—Silks, Silks, Silks, a new supply at Kauffman's store.

FORMAL OPENING.—Zeigler's bakery on Penn street will be formally opened to the public during the holidays. The new and well furnished rooms will be tastefully arranged for the reception of guests, and the choicest of fare will be served during the week, such as Roast Turkey, Fresh Oysters, prepared in all styles, Ice Cream, Cakes, &c. It is also the intention of Mr. and Mrs. Zeigler to secure the services of the band to enliven the occasion.

An experienced baker from Lock Haven has been engaged to assist in filling the many orders for the holidays. Persons wishing fine cakes for Christmas or New Year are requested to hand in their orders two weeks previous. Choice Cakes, finely decorated, from 50 cents to $3.00. A liberal patronage respectfully solicited.

—It is surprising to behold the crowd of juveniles, which populate our boardwalks about the time school leaves out, and the sight involuntarily suggests the thought that the teachers who have charge of these young people during a whole day, must indeed have a hard, thankless, unappreciated life of wear and worry. Yet, despite the unusually large number of children in attendance at our schools, our teachers work earnestly and will certainly meet with fair success if supported by the parents of their scholars. Parents should feel interested enough to visit the different departments and by their presence and a few kindly words of encouragement spoken to the teacher cheer him on his toilsome way. This subject has been handled in the paper and in conversation time and again, but it is one which indeed deserves frequent repetition.

—Friday's Philipsburg Journal gives an account of a very serious accident which occurred in that town on Tuesday evening of last week. Mr. Ferguson, one of its citizens, residing on Maple street, was seated at a table, engaged in filling cartridge shells with ammunition. A box containing about three pounds of powder, a lamp and a few other articles stood on the table. His wife was bending over his shoulder watching his work, and his little two-year-old baby was playing about his knees. Mr. F. had just filled a shell with powder and was in the act of closing it with wad, which he trimmed with a pair of shears, when a terrible explosion took place. The force of the concussion lifted Mrs. Ferguson off her feet and threw her out of the front door on the street, where shortly afterward she was found by frightened neighbors, in a bad condition, with breast and face horribly burned. The poor little girl had been thrown under the table and when discovered was in awful pain and agony, her whole countenance being covered with one mass of white blisters. Mr. F. was injured the least of all. The house was badly wrecked by the blast. The report of the explosion could be heard three blocks away and the people of Philipsburg were in a state of intense excitement.

A Fatal Hunting Accident.

MIFFLINTOWN, Pa., Nov. 27.—A gunning accident on the Black Log Mountains yesterday, which in all probability will prove fatal. Jonathan Coffman and William Musselman started early Thanksgiving morning to hunt wild turkeys. When on the mountain they separated, each traversing a certain district in the same direction. About 3 o'clock in the afternoon Coffman came upon a flock of turkeys and followed them some distance, when a large gobbler strayed from the flock and h shot at it, but missed it. The ball struck a stone and glanced off, hitting young Musselman, who was standing behind a tree near by watching the same turkey, in the face, the leaden missile passing into his eye and down through the shoulder and liver into his abdomen. He gave a loud cry and said he was shot. Coffman quickly ran to the spot from which the cry came, and was hoarified to find his companion lying on the ground, fatally wounded by a bullet from his gun. He called two other men who were near by, and they carried the young man to the residence of William McCahan, where a physician was quickly summoned. A messenger was sent to his mother and family with the sad intelligence of the awful accident. An ambulance was sent to the residence of Mr. McCahan, but young Musselman was suffering such excruciating pain and his wounds were so serious that the attending physician would not allow him to be removed to his home. The shooting was purely accidental, and no blame or carelessness whatever can be attached to the sad occurrence. He was the only support of a widowed mother and large family, his father having died a few years ago. The mother is almost frantic with grief. This evening the physicians say there is little or no hope of his recovery, and that in all probability he will not survive through the night.

An Efficient Remedy

In all cases of Bronchial and Pulmonary Affections is AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. As such it is recognized and prescribed by the medical profession, and in many thousands of families, for the past forty years, it has been regarded as an invaluable household remedy. It is a preparation that only requires to be taken in very small quantities, and a few doses of it administered in the early stages of a cold or cough will effect a speedy cure, and may, very possibly, save life. There is no doubt whatever that

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

Has preserved the lives of great numbers of persons, by arresting the development of Laryngitis, Bronchitis, Pneumonia, and Pulmonary Consumption, and by the cure of those dangerous maladies. It should be kept ready for use in every family where there are children, as it is a medicine far superior to all others in the treatment of Croup, the alleviation of Whooping Cough, and the cure of Colds and Influenza, ailments peculiarly incidental to childhood and youth. Promptitude in dealing with all diseases of this class is of the utmost importance. The loss of a single day may, in many cases, entail fatal consequences. Do not waste precious time in experimenting with medicines of doubtful efficacy, while the malady is constantly gaining a deeper hold, but take at once the speediest and most certain to cure,

QUAKER
TABLE SAUCE.

Thousands of articles are now manufactured that in former years had to be imported, paying high import duty as it is now being done on Lea & Perrins table sauce; the QUAKER TABLE SAUCE takes its place; it has been pronounced by competent judges just as good and even better. The QUAKER SAUCE has Slowly but surely gained great importance and is replacing the very best imported sauce on the shelf of the grocer, the tables of the restaurant and the tables of the rich and poor men, ; really prized and relished by all on account of its piquancy, aroma, taste, strength and pureness. The inventor has by years of study of the secret virtues contained in the aromatic spices of the Indies and China, such as mace, nutmeg, cinnamon, genuine Jamaica ginger, and peppers and buds of trees unknown to most men, and by long practice succeeded to combine their extracts in such a liquid form as we now find it, of agreeable taste, and so invigorating as to be taken in place of stomach bitters. By manufacturing this sauce here, heavy import duties and freights are saved, and it is sold at a lower figure to the dealer, who making a better profit on Quaker Sauce can sell it to the consumer cheaper than he very best imported article hardly equaling ours. If your grocer does not keep it, write us for prices, etc. Sold in bottles or by the gallon.

claim. In this he was mistaken. One day, while out on a hunting expedition, he discharged his gun accidentally, and received several shot in his arm and side. He got home without difficulty, and, examining the wounds, made up his mind that he would go to town in the morning to have them attended to. The next day he was in no condition to move and was obliged to keep his bed. Growing rapidly worse and fearing that his injuries would result seriously if not attended to, he watched for his next door neighbor, and when he saw her he signaled for her to come to him. The girl came up and heard his story, and volunteered to go to town for a doctor. When the physician arrived and dressed Belden's wounds Helen told him that she would look in occasionally and attend to the sick man's wants, and she kept her promise religiously. For nearly a month she visited the Belden shack regularly, cooked and served Belden's meals, dressed his wounds, and helped him as tenderly as a relative could. When he got so that he could sit up and help himself, her visits became shorter and at longer intervals, and at length they ceased altogether.

This last spring it became necessary for somebody to put in the crops if anything was to be done. Belden had had no settlement with the girl, and she appeared to be making preparations to work his farm as well her own. He didn't want to give up beaten, and he could not quarrel with a woman, especially one to whom he was under so many obligations. Finding that things were becoming intolerable as they were he called on her one evening in May, and they had a long talk, the result of which has just been discovered. After that consultation they were frequently together. They worked both farms this year and made big crops, and last week they were married.

PYÆMIA

Is the most virulent form of blood-poisoning. Less speedily fatal, but not less certainly so, is the vitiation of the blood of which the first symptoms are Pimples, Sties, Boils, and Cutaneous Eruptions. When the taint of Scrofula gives warning of its presence by such indications, no time should be lost in using AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, the only perfect and reliable medicine for the purification of the blood.

SCROFULA

Is a foul corruption in the blood that rots out all the machinery of life. Nothing will eradicate it from the system and prevent its transmission to offspring but AYER'S SARSAPARILLA.
